

Biggie

Lately, I've been listening to one song on repeat. I have no idea why. It's kind of a messed up song but it's so poetic and raw that it's messed up in a good way. It's not the original song but a remix but I still enjoy it nonetheless. It's called "Suicidal Thoughts Notorious Big Remix Kanye". Biggie gets on the phone with his friend and pours his heart out to him about how he feel and wants to end his life. Back then, music was better because people actually said what they felt and were just... real, you know? Nowadays, it's about sleeping around, having parties, doing drugs, alcohol, sexual acts, etc. There aren't any real emotions. They aren't saying what they feel and laying it out to the listener. It's disappointing. That's why I listen to the music from back in the days. This is my opinion and I'm entitled it. Some people may believe the music is better but hey! That's their opinion.
