

Please Click Here to Review this Short Story

The Activist

Maria, short with long light brown hair and large brown oval eyes, loved the city. She adored the way the skies turned gray when it was about to pour and when it became a vibrant shade of blue. Maria loved how the trees would sway in the wind with its beautiful green leaves. She worked in a Chase Bank and on her commute to work there were multiple times she saw things she didn't adore. For instance, she increasingly grew agitated by the constant sound of construction. Maria wasn't fond of the trash that was everywhere and how no one cared to do a thing about it. She decided to gather a group of fellow zealots in order to protest the lack of care about their environment. They all believed that the lack of care for the parks and sidewalks were salient points to focus on. Eventually, their voices were heard and they were able to begin a new program that was meant to help keep the city clean.

Please Click Here to Review this Short Story